To view the Changelog, visit this page. What's New? Previously, when you used the commandline, it showed you the download progress. However, it was slow, not a convenient way to watch the download progress. Now, when you use the commandline, you'll get the download progress like this: $ php scala download [local] ✓ 1.0.0 is already available at local [local] This works on Mac OS X and Linux. Apart from the download progress, you can also view the install progress. The install progress is displayed in red, when there is an error. For example, it showed "1.0.0 is already available at local." Again, this works on Mac OS X and Linux. What's Next? I'll be happy if anyone wants to contribute to this project. I already have a few features planned for the next release. Some Improvements Command Line New commandline feature: It can watch the progress of the download and install. It works in Mac OS X and Linux. Notification Notification bar has been improved. It now shows the progress of your download and install, and when the install finishes. When installing, it also shows you what's happening in the terminal. When you use the commandline or notification bar, it's easier to keep an eye on your download and install progress. Other Improvements In 0.8.0, I tried to add a better search feature, using the keyword. It searches for the keyword you input. However, it did not work very well. For example, if
