Kent's Tony Martin: A global star The MCC player, who made a Test debut for England against India in 2008, has been a regular in the Kent side since making his debut in 2005. He was part of the ECB's Player of the Year award for 2009, and with the 2009-10 winter's tour of the Caribbean and four Tests in South Africa, his international career has reached a new high. He told BBC South East Today: "I'm very proud and privileged to play for Kent. They've been very good to me and I've been very lucky. "I enjoy my cricket and I look forward to seeing how many more Tests I play for England. "I've had a lot of ups and downs and made a lot of mistakes but I hope I'm learning from them and I hope that I can enjoy my cricket for as long as I can. "I've made the most of my opportunities and I've done it against some of the best players in the world. "I've been fortunate to be part of some special occasions. In Australia I scored a century in the first Test in Adelaide and I've been lucky enough to play for England in India and South Africa. "I know I'll look back and think 'what a privilege it was' and look forward to doing it again." And the 24-year-old, who has played 16 Tests and 19 one-day internationals for England, has no doubt that he can still go one better. "I've been thinking about it a little bit. It's up to me, my career will tell, but I can't think about the end of it because that's not how it's been working up to now. "We're playing so many Test matches these days that the Ashes [in Australia in 2010] are a long way away. "There's something different about the England set-up compared to the last time I was in Australia 2d92ce491b
