Management and outcome of ovarian cancer in young women. Ovarian cancer is a disease of old age. The knowledge regarding the biology, the prognosis and the management of ovarian cancer has been derived from data collected in the age group over 70 years. This experience is often absent from the medical literature regarding women under the age of 30 years. Nevertheless, young women are a relevant group of patients because the number of women in this age group is increasing. This article will focus on the management of ovarian cancer in young women, with special emphasis on the clinical features and the outlook of the disease. Results of recent large, randomized controlled studies, undertaken in young women, will be discussed. In addition, epidemiological, pathological, biological and therapeutic data will be given. Finally, data on fertility-sparing surgery and fertility preservation in this age group will be presented. Here is a quick summary of the new statements It is now possible to turn off the the fact that is changed to true when a reference to some record has been changed When a record is deleted, the references are not deleted The 'changed' events for fields (and many others) can now be set so that they don't happen if field is unchanged (i.e. is false) The change to true when a reference has been changed can now be turned off so references are not always assumed 754eb5d184
