A: The bios master key generator on the 595b is separate from the password. If you use this tool you are supposed to enter a new password but the tool just generates a new master key. It is not a live disk. The original machine used a bios password and the mac used the hardware password. Q: Automatically closing unknown frame I have a problem that I can't figure out how to solve. I have an app where I draw pictures on the screen (not exactly, but close). The app is in portrait mode and when I switch orientation to landscape, the app stays in portrait mode, in an unwanted state of the screen. I have tried to fix this by setting the frames to be automatically created when the app is launched in landscape mode (setting them through code) and then just make the code to be run only when the orientation changes to landscape, but that didn't work (it still didn't work when I rotate the phone while the app is running in the simulator). This is the code that I use to set the default frame: -(void)didMoveToWindow { [self setDefaultFrame:YES]; [self createFrontNavigationController]; [self createMenuController]; } - (BOOL)shouldAutorotateToInterfaceOrientation:(UIInterfaceOrientation)interfaceOrientation { return (interfaceOrientation == UIInterfaceOrientationPortrait); } and this is the code for creating the front controller: -(void)createFrontNavigationController{ UINavigationController *frontController = [[UINavigationController alloc] init
