Dephosphorylation of thiophosphate at the 5'-terminal position of pyridine 5-thiophosphate-poly(U) by yeast pyrophosphatase was studied. Enzymatic activity for thiophosphate was found to be much lower than that for normal phosphate at pH 7.4 and 5 degrees C. Both the Km and the Vmax for thiophosphate are similar to those for phosphate. However, optimum pH and optimum Mg2+ concentration are 4.5 and 4 mM, respectively. These characteristics are similar to those for the dephosphorylation of the 5'-terminal phosphate. Thiophosphate is formed from thiophosphate at the 5'-terminal position of poly(U). The yields of thiophosphate from poly(U) and of dephosphorylated poly(U) from thiophosphate are similar. The thiophosphate-containing thiophosphorylated oligomer is readily dephosphorylated at a 5'-terminal phosphate, but
