It is much faster to scan using the TWAIN.jpeg option, as described on Scanning digital negatives.`.jpg` Just like.jpeg,.jpg _is a proprietary extension for the_`.jpeg` _format_. It's a proprietary extension because the`.jpg` file type is not associated with any one software program.`.png` .PNG ( _Portable Network Graphics_ ) is a popular file extension for image files that are created with the GIMP or Paint.NET..PNG is _not_ an Adobe proprietary format. .PNG has two forms: opaque (the one you probably know), and transparent. Opaque images are intended for printing, so the color information is preserved. Transparent images are intended for onscreen viewing, so the color information is not preserved. Photoshop uses a _PNG stack_ to manage the image files, which are saved as .psd_ files. Most scanners create.png files or.jpg files,`

Q: Template tag always showing as active while saving I'm using Django 1.7 and I've made some custom template tags. I'm able to insert the tags in the template page. But as soon as I save the page, the template tag appears as active in the template section. It shouldn't be active at all. Is there a way to hide this? All I want to show is something like { % in_main_tag "something" % }. But I don't want to show this.

A: You could get the main tag and store it in a variable. Then display it after you save the current page. Here's an example of the template tag: from django import template import re register = template.Library() def get_main_tag(context):

main = "hello world" path = re.sub("([^/]+)$", r"\1/", context['request'].path) url = " + path print(url) try: html =
urlopen(url).read() return html.strip() except: return "" @register.filter(name='main_tag') def main_tag(context):
return get_main_tag(context) Usage: {% main_tag as main_tag_html %} {{main_tag_html}} for more info see:

Food establishments in Canada A typical Canadian dining establishment, according to the foodservice operator association of Canada (FOA) in 2015, has one or two bars, a selection of high-end casual restaurants, a fast food outlet, a coffeehouse and a bakery, as well as a selection of specialty retail stores, and of course a buffet restaurant. All restaurants in Canada are licensed by Health Canada, an agency of the Ministry of Health and Social Services. A restaurant must maintain an Effective Food Control Plan which is available on the Health Canada website for all foodservice establishments. Restaurants are inspected on a regular basis by
