Q: How to fix Password strength checking I have a code that checks if the password strength is enough based on the number of characters. It returns a String array, 1 is enough, 2 is too weak, and 3 is too strong. This works fine, but when the correct password length is four it still returns 1, which is not enough. I want to change this to just return 2 when the password length is four. public class PasswordStrengthChecker { private String currentPassword = "Password123"; public int checkPass() { int best=0; int numberOfCharacters = 0; for (int i=0; i

This invention relates to an electrophotographic copying machine and more particularly to a solid state exposing device for an electrophotographic copying machine. In the electrophotographic copying machine, an image is formed on a photosensitive element by a laser beam scanning device. Such a device is disclosed in, for example, Japanese Laid-Open Patent Publication No. 58(1983)-169743, etc. The exposing device for the electrophotographic copying machine is generally constructed by assembling a laser beam generating device with a large size which includes a plurality of laser beams generating means, a prism for focusing a plurality of laser beams emitted from the laser beam generating device into a single beam, and a half mirror for directing the laser beam from the prism to a photosensitive element or an exposing glass through a optical fiber. The photosensitive element is maintained in a dark place, and a laser beam emitted from the above mentioned exposing device is directed to the photosensitive element, the exposing glass or an intermediate transfer medium via the optical fiber. Since the laser beam generating device requires a large size in order to generate a plurality of laser beams, various optical parts are inevitably and unsuitably arranged in the space occupied by the optical system for the purpose of securing a proper assembling width of the device. In this regard, many parts must be mounted in the conventional device, and the assembling operation of the device requires a complicated operation.Skeletal muscle transglutaminases modulate insulin signaling. The expression and activity of transglutaminases (TGases) is altered in a number of diseases including diabetes and obesity, leading to cell death through various pathways. However, the precise pathophysiological relevance of TGases in diabetes is not known. The present study is to investigate the potential role of TGases in the regulation of insulin signaling. The effects of recombinant TGase-2 (rTGase-2) on insulin signaling were evaluated using isolated rat soleus muscles. TGase activity in skeletal muscle of type 2 diabetic rats was also evaluated by the kinetic spectrophotometry. Expression of TGase-2 was detected in skeletal muscle of type 2 diabetes. Compared to normoglycemic rats, soleus muscles of type 2 diabetic rats exhibited decreased phosphorylation of Akt (T308 and T450)

and increased phosphorylation of JNK and p38, showing decreased phosphorylation of IRS-1. Single intracellular injection of rTGase-2 dose-dependently improved insulin signaling
