

#4 RULES OF ATTRACTION What could be worse than going far into a deserted English countryside to take up a new position and hear the gossip. If you stay in England for a short time, you may encounter the temptations and challenges of working in the countryside. See BLIND TRAINING RULE 1: Wrong time, wrong place. See also RULES OF ENGAGEMENT. ATTRACT PEOPLE (PRECIOUS) OR STAY LONE. What qualities or skills do people want in you when it comes to hiring? 1. Act fast In the UK, people are oriented towards solving problems, not creating them. This means that if a potential employee comes into the office and says that your department does not deal with problems, then he will be quickly fired. If you can't fix the problem in a short time, you won't be charged for anything. People get irritated quickly when they see that their "game" has failed. On the other hand, if you: use your time efficiently Doing what you love to do or making time for it Do you have experience in a field in which you excel? Drive to work in a car you like to drive Do you really use all these advantages to succeed in your work? 2.Listen to people But not only to their immediate colleagues. The people you do business with are also your potential customers or allies. However, by focusing on your direct colleagues, you run the risk of running into misunderstandings that you have to deal with. Perhaps the most important piece of advice about working in the UK is this: don't 'just promote your project' and don't listen to people who say 'I'll do it'. More important is to "explore, understand and help people solve their problems." Come and watch other people work until you find someone who fits your needs. And when that happens, use their knowledge and experience to build a successful business. (The word "exploration" in the English idiom "try to draw out something (or someone) out of somebody" is synonymous with
