KeyMacro makes it simple to create macros which will translate keystrokes into meaningful tasks. This means you can record a string of keystrokes without having to worry about remembering what they are. Instead it records your keystrokes as a string of numbers which you can then use to define the macros you want. This can be useful in situations like: [?] You want to convert a string of numbers to a color value. [?] You want to take a set of numbers and make a list of keystrokes which will copy them to the clipboard.

For example: 00 01 02 03

Gtk2ColorExtract: Overview

Gtk2ColorExtract is a tool to convert gtk+2 themes to a plain text format suitable for parsing and modifying. Currently the supported formats are included, which are Gtk2-XDG-Colorset, Gtk2-Langpack, and Gtk2-Css. The converted files contain plain text with the property information. You can view the file contents in the file manager and understand the property information of the theme. To add or modify the format of the default theme, you can modify the Gtk2-Themesrc file in your home directory. # 1.

I have tried `sed "s/-v-//g" test.cfg` but get `-v-: command not found` I know it is a single character, but how do I remove it? A: Your shell may not support `-v-` or it may interpret it as a system call or similar. Try running the command as a bash script: `$ cat test.cfg` `#!/bin/bash exec -v- $ bash` test.cfg Using it in a file: $ cat test.cfg #!/bin/bash exec -v- A: The -v- at the end is an option given to the command on the right side. If you want to make your config file executable, run: chmod +x configfile.cfg which will change the file's mode from rwxrxr-x to rw-r-r-x. The added executable bit means that if you run the program by double-clicking the file, it will execute the program. A: Just use: sed -

- Handy Tools This is a really great program. As soon as I tried it and set it up I found it so easy to use that I have been using it ever since. It has proved to be invaluable when it comes to encoding text for use on websites and e-mails. You simply highlight a block of text and then choose the encoding you want to use, then hit Convert and the result appears on the screen! I will not hesitate to recommend this program and I would hope that it continues to receive the praise that it deserves.
