
production since 2011, and is considered by many to be among the best shows on television. In addition to hosting, the show has plenty of featured players, including Parks and Recreation star Michael Pete, former Community star Danny Pudi, comedians Eli Olsberg and Joe Mande, and more. According to Fullscreen, you don't need to be an experienced stand-up comic to audition, as they are looking for good and funny improvisers. The application is here, and should you get selected, you will have three or four development days to work with the producers before taping. To learn more about the show, you can visit the Comedy Central website. H/T: The Hollywood Reporter

Q: Ceiling Div I want to do a div that take the whole screen, but i want to put it slightly below the main. How i can do that? A: Set position:relative to it's parent div (in this case, to its parent, which is.wrap) then set it's top margin equal to the height of the other div. If you know the height of the other div, you can get this by using the height property of it's parent. In this case I used 100%, but that is just my way of saying "the same as the screen height"

This is simply a HTML/CSS example. You can more or less do this with any HTML/CSS combination. HTML: ... CSS: * { padding:0; margin:0; } body { padding:10px; } .wrap { position:relative; overflow:hidden; width:100%; height:100%; 3e33713323
