What's New In WebBoard?

WebBoard is the powerful app for whiteboarding and sharing ideas. It combines several functions in one place, making it a great choice for home or business use. Create a drawing with your own pen or stylus, place it on a grid and drag it around the board to move the drawing. Hand-draw in your own style or use tools to place shapes, create text, and use custom colors to bring your drawing to life. Share your drawing directly to Dropbox, Google Drive, Box, OneDrive, Microsoft SkyDrive, or OneNote, or via email. - Create, edit, and share drawings - Hand-draw your own style or use tools to add shapes, text, and colors - Drag your drawing around to move it - Attach to Dropbox, Google Drive, Box, OneDrive, Microsoft SkyDrive, or OneNote - Use your custom colors and brushes - Upload to OneDrive - Share directly to Dropbox, Google Drive, Box, OneDrive, Microsoft SkyDrive, or OneNote This Microsoft Store app has a very simple interface, which allows you to swiftly get straight to the point. The menu elements are positioned in a way that lets most of the screen space be used for your cross-platform drawings. Easy to use, but it only provides a few tools There are few tools available to draw with, so don't expect much from that area. There is only one type of brush, and you cannot change its size either. But you can at least create any color that you want through the custom color option. There's also the option for you to grab any color on the board with the color picker tool. What may be the most annoying is the fact that there is no Undo option whatsoever. You can only do a "clear all" action, or choose to erase manually, but I think such a simple feature should've been added. If you require it, you can choose to activate and work with a grid on top of your canvas too. Or you can even import an image onto the board and start drawing over it. Sharing your "piece of art" with others A very useful feature that can help you in your workdays is the sharing option, which works through the OneDrive service. It is very easy to share your drawings, but first, you need to save them. After they are saved, you only need to go to the board's gallery and click the tiny OneDrive icon in the upper right corner of each drawing. You have two options when you do that: either click the Share button, which will copy a link to your clipboard, or upload the drawing to OneDrive. Work on your whiteboarding skills Although it could make use of some extra quality-of-life features, WebBoard
