In my new book that is set to be released in 2014, I will be writing about my heart-throb of a husband, my college-educated, not-so-super-hot neighbor, the son of my childhood best friend, and some random guy who wasn't in any of my classes or circle of friends or any of my real-life relationships. It's a novel called Someone Is Reading This, and it'll be available in 2014. No, wait, it'll be available in 2015. In 2017. On Kindle. People always ask me where my inspiration for someone is reading this is coming from, and the simple answer is: love. The reality is that someone was reading this during a very confusing time in my life, and that was my main inspiration for writing. The best way I can describe the book is that it's a very confusing, emotional novel, and it's set in Wisconsin. What do I mean by confusing? It's the story of a girl named Ashley who is feeling a bit out of sorts with her life and her relationship. She starts off the novel not really knowing who she is anymore, and doesn't even really know what she wants. She has a lot of issues that she hasn't fully dealt with, and that she doesn't really understand. She's lost her best friend in the last year and her boyfriend has just broken up with her. She is trying to figure out who she is in this new life that she's living, and she's struggling with some difficult issues. The novel is not meant to make sense, and that's really the most honest way to describe the story. It does have a happy ending, but
