Category:Maintenance software Category:Media players Category:Classic Mac OS software Category:Utilities for macOS Category:Classic Mac OS software ported to macOS: "Unable to open video file" when trying to pass a video file through a socket connection I'm creating a program that passes through a video file that is stored on the client's computer through a socket connection. In the following code, it will read the video file then pass it to the server as a byte stream in order to be played by the server's MediaPlayer. The problem is that when I try to connect to the localhost it gets an error. Trying to run this on a localhost of my home PC, I tried this code in Win7 64 Bit, and a similar one on my laptop with Win8 64 Bit. Both of the machines work perfectly with this. I tried running as an admin, and tried disabling firewall, antivirus, and other security programs.

class client:
    def __init__(self, host, port, file_path):
        self.host = host
        self.port = port
        self.file_path = file_path open_file = open(file_path, 'rb') length = open_file.tell() open_file.seek(0)
        self.connection = socket.socket(socket.AF_INET, socket.SOCK_STREAM) self.connection.connect((self.host, self.port)) self.video_stream = open_file.read(length) self.video_stream = self.video_stream.encode('UTF-8')
class server:
    def __init__(self):
        self.player = MediaPlayer()
    try:
        self.connection = socket.socket(socket.AF_INET, socket.SOCK_STREAM)
        self.connection.bind(("", self.port)) self.connection.listen(1)
