, though it's unlikely the team could afford him anyway. The chance of a miracle trade coming to fruition is dwindling with each passing day. If it doesn't happen this offseason, then it would probably come next offseason. Robinson hasn't played the outfield (over 100 innings) since 2014. He hasn't even seen a pitch in that position in over two years. His body is probably better suited for first base, where he has played the last six years. Robinson's outfield defense last season at Iowa was that of a defensive replacement. His range in center was the worst in the Midwest League, and his throwing arm couldn't cover that range much longer. He still has that arm, but he won't be able to run fast enough to cover it. He still has some value in the outfield, but not as much as you think he has. Whoever trades for him should assume he'll never be able to repeat his offensive numbers in the majors. The fact that he was unable to even do that in Iowa should be a red flag for whoever is attempting a trade. It's almost unthinkable that Iowa would give up on a prospect so quickly. I can't think of any number of teams who would be willing to pay a 100th-round pick for him. Heck, I can't think of any number of teams willing to pay a 100th-round pick for him. Robinson has a career.215/.289/.327 line in his career. He has hit less than 20 homers in each of his four years in the minors. He hasn't posted a WAR above 0.0 since 2012. Last season at Iowa, he finished with a -0.3 WAR. Robinson played in 95 games last season, 98 the year before, and 87 the year before that. If you're paying attention to his minor league stats, you know that is not how he is playing the game right now. He's played in around 60 games over the last two seasons. That's not enough. Robinson was once considered a potential top-100 overall prospect in baseball. He was a short-season first-round pick in 2012. But in the intervening seasons, he has performed so poorly that I'm surprised someone still thinks he's even worth a 100th-round pick. I've heard enough third-rounders talk about how they'd want him if they were a team that drafts in that range. If I were Robinson, I would want to go to the

Q: My profile: not very high quality I don't really have a quality problem, but I'm curious, when searching for my own profile, are the other people's photos or "smilies" there, too? (i.e. are they still visible in preview mode?) I don't see any of the photos or smilies on my own profile page, and only get an empty space with the name and reputation info. A: I guess the displayed material is cached. My profile reveals the original material. As for the empty space, it has to be like that. Q: Multiple functions are not printing in the same line import java.util.; import java.io.;
