The defender, who has long been a fan of Ajax, has been playing with Roda during the preseason. "The opportunity came up and I'm still young, and it's not the end of my career, so I'm thinking of continuing for a season," said Fouda. Speaking ahead of the season opener against De Graafschap on Sunday, the 35-year-old said he had no intentions of ending his playing career and that he would retire after Ajax, with whom he currently plays his club football. "We're not thinking of an end of the season. When you stop playing, you have to think about the end of the season, the end of a project," Fouda. "If I have the possibility to continue, I will do so, because we are together now, and I'm thinking of Ajax and the coaches. And there's a lot of love for this club." However, Fouda admitted that the thought of starting a new chapter would not be an easy task as he would have to leave the supporters and the club behind. "I look forward to it, but it's not a green light. I already think of a new chapter." "I've always wanted to play for Ajax. I've always felt close to this club, and there was also a French agent who was here, and so I started the negotiations, and I think there was
