No need to tear your hair out trying to remember where all the time went. Interleukin-2 and interferon-alpha-2b in advanced melanoma. It has been shown in many clinical trials that the interferon-alpha-2b (IFN-alpha-2b) has an important antitumor effect in metastatic melanoma. Furthermore, interleukin-2 (IL-2) has been shown to augment the immune effector functions. There is a need to further assess the combination of IL-2 and IFN-alpha-2b in advanced melanoma. Our prospective study was undertaken to determine the response of the IL-2/IFN-alpha-2b combination in advanced melanoma. There were five patients with measurable metastatic melanoma with an average age of 45 years. The patients received 15 million units of IL-2 on days 1-5 and 10 million units of IFN-alpha-2b on days 1 and 4. The dose of IL-2 was escalated in 2.5 million units increments and was escalated if there was no major toxicity. Four of the 5 patients had a partial response. The mean duration of response was 19 months. The minimal effective dose of IL-2 was 9 million units. The combination of IL-2 and IFN-alpha-2b may have important antitumor activity in advanced melanoma. Kollek's Law (Strategic and Nontraditional) Kollek's Law The political center in the United States is in the process of becoming more and more irrelevant as more and more voter are turning towards the right and to the left. You do not want to offend a leftist (on the Left), or you would lose them as a voter. Consequently, the center does not offer any solutions to voter problems that concern them. Hence, there is a growing number of more extreme voters on the Right and Left. Consequently, the center is becoming more and more irrelevant as the candidates play to the extremes of the spectrum. The result of this is that if we want to stay competitive in the United States, we have to take a broader view of the issues. We have to be more than a mere right wing or left wing ideologue. We need to be pragmatists. We need to find out what it is that voters want and the best way to deliver it to them, then we have to find a common ground. The traditional center is not interested in compromise. They
