1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a method of manufacturing a liquid crystal display device and to a liquid crystal display device manufactured by using the same. 2. Description of the Prior Art In recent years, various types of liquid crystal display devices have been put into practical use. For example, a liquid crystal display device, in which a liquid crystal material is sandwiched by two substrates, and a liquid crystal material contained in the liquid crystal layer is changed in optical property by an electric field applied to the liquid crystal layer in a direction perpendicular to the substrate surface, thereby displaying an image, has been known as an active matrix display device. Among such liquid crystal display devices, a display device of twisted nematic (TN) mode, which has been generally employed in the past, has been improved in an aspect of viewing angle dependency of display quality by utilization of a multi-domain system, in which a liquid crystal material is driven in a multi-domain structure in the direction perpendicular to a substrate. The following has been known for obtaining a multi-domain display: The following method has been known for obtaining a multi-domain display: to form a plurality of electrode fingers on one of the two substrates or an insulating substrate arranged between the two substrates and to apply an electric field between the electrode finger and a pixel electrode of the other substrate, thereby obtaining a multi-domain structure in which liquid crystal molecules having positive and negative dielectric anisotropy are twisted in an opposite direction between the substrate and the electrode. An example of such a liquid crystal display device has been disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication No.HEI 1-289308. In the liquid crystal display device disclosed in the gazette, a plurality of grooves are formed between a pixel electrode and a counter electrode, wherein the liquid crystal material is driven in a multi-domain structure by the electric field generated between the pixel electrode and the counter electrode. Further, in the liquid crystal display device described above, grooves of a predetermined configuration are formed at a predetermined position, for example, on a counter electrode side of a substrate, and a pixel electrode is formed to fill the grooves. In this liquid crystal display device, the liquid crystal molecules are driven in the multi-domain structure in the direction of a normal line of the substrate by using the electric field generated at the side wall of the groove, so that the viewing angle can be improved. However, in the liquid crystal
