It is my understanding that normally, when the form is submitted Angular will update the model of the directive. However, I would like the model of the directive to be updated to reflect the model of the parent form. For instance, say there is a group of radio-buttons in the parent form, bound to the group property of the directive: {{item.label}} Then when the form is submitted and Angular updates the model of the form, the model of the form.group, and as a result the model of the directive is still the one that was submitted when the form was empty.

I would like the model of the 3e33713323
