Keyboard Macro Manager is a program designed to manage keyboard macros. With this tool, you can create your own macros, assign them to your keys or use the auto-execute option to make them run. These are a very useful feature, since you can save the repetitive tasks in a single set of instructions that you can call at any time you like. Thus, you can save your time while typing something similar to the following: Ctrl+H Ctrl+B Ctrl+A Ctrl+P The program is very simple to use. You just need to drag the tool, your key and the content of your macro to a new location. In addition, you can also create a new macro by double-clicking on a selected key. You can then rename it and set its shortcut. All in all, Keyboard Macro Manager is a very easy to use tool that can save you quite a bit of time. It is very intuitive and easy to use. You can even create a new macro by simply dragging it and then it will appear on your desktop. It has a clean and simple layout, so you can easily find the macro you want to edit. Smileytunes Description: Smileytunes is an app that plays music that makes the user smile. The app was created with the sole purpose of helping users stay positive throughout their day. It does so by playing happy, upbeat music and by using a random shuffle function. As mentioned, the app is all about helping users feel better. Thus, the entire app can be split into two categories, one of which is called the Locker and the other one is called the Listener. For the Locker category, you can have different soundtracks to listen to while you are in the bathroom, showering, working or resting. There are several folders, such as Music, Bath and Work, among others. There are three locker players available. The first is the Random shuffle option. As its name suggests, this player plays music in a random way. To do so, it analyzes the music you've previously played. It then decides what kind of music to play next by analyzing the music that you played the previous time you used the locker player. The second is the Music folder. This is where you can find all the various musical tracks you have placed in this particular folder. The third one is the Bath folder. In the Listener category, you can browse the various folders, so you can listen to music you

MultiTimer is an application that helps you to keep track of how long it takes to do a given task, and so that you can refer to that task later. It's features: - Keeps track of ten timers - Tracks lap times - Allows you to export the results in various formats (CSV, TXT) - Has a neat and clean layout - Will allow you to combine the Shift button with the numbers keys to stop/start any of the timers - Allows you to create labels to assign the names of the timers - Allows you to define the shortcuts you want - It's one of the few apps that's been tested on Windows 7 and will run on it without problems ===== Version 1.0.2: fixed: a bug that was blocking the app to have a key pressed ===== Version 1.0.1: The beta version has been removed. There are no more updates planned. ===== Version 1.0: This is a new version of the app. Some new features: - The timers can now be created or stopped with the Shift key, not only the number keys - You can define keyboard shortcuts for quick access - The most important feature is that you can create a label to assign the name of the timer - It's tested on Windows 7 and works properly ===== Version 0.9: - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version - A new version has been created ===== Version 0.8: - This is the first release - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version - A new version has been created ===== Version 0.7: - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version - A new version has been created ===== Version 0.6: - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version - A new version has been created ===== Version 0.5: - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version - A new version has been created ===== Version 0.4: - The beta version has been removed - A bug was found in the previous version -

What's New in the?

If you have any forms of diabetes, you can use this software. It has a long list of features, and all of them are related to dealing with diabetes, but the ones you are likely to use most are probably the ones that work with the last-recorded time, like how long your blood sugar levels stay over or under a certain level. You can set custom levels for each of these, or you can have it give you a daily or monthly average. In fact, most of the features are set to give you a daily average, although you can have them all work in a given time interval. You can have it give you a graph of your data, too, although you can only see the most recent graphs if you use the daily average, and you can only export data in CSV format. This is a feature I have used more than once, because in addition to keeping track of my blood sugar levels, I have used it to track how often I exercise. Normally, I exercise every day, but sometimes, it is hard to make it into the gym, and sometimes, you need to wait for the right time. Features: This program does not record much data by itself. There are a lot of features, though, that can be useful to anyone who has diabetes. I am not a diabetic, but I have used some of the features of this software more than once, and they are all very useful for keeping track of your diabetes. Here are the features that you are likely to use: Global averages: Most of the features in this app do not use your diabetes numbers, but the averages. For instance, you can have it tell you how many hours you were over a certain threshold, but there is no way to view it in a graph or a chart. The only way to see it is to click on the "Get data..." button, and there are several charts you can use, ranging from the last 24 hours to a single day, month, or year. Custom levels: The custom levels allow you to control how your blood sugar is normally measured. You can have it tell you the current number every 15 minutes, 5 times a day, etc. Graphical display: This program allows you to display the data in a graph or in a table, with much of the data showing up in a chart. You can also export your data as a CSV or TXT file. Exercise tracker: You can keep track of how often you exercise, and how long each exercise lasts. Notifications: You can set a number of reminders, and you can get a notification on your phone when you reach a certain number. You can also set a time to get a notification. Options: There are a lot of options, but they are all well explained and easy to understand. Biggest problems: You cannot create an account, and that is my only complaint with this program.
