Is there something that I am doing wrong when trying to compile, or would the time I spent on this be better spent at family activities? A: You are missing the PATH variable, that is why your program is not being found. You would need to add it like this: export PATH="${PATH}:/usr/local/bin" Since you added ~/Desktop/MyCrack/Crack.exe to your PATH variable, I think you meant ~/Desktop/MyCrack/Crack.exe The present invention relates to rotary electric machines and more particularly to drive mechanisms for a rotor of such machines. A drive motor for a rotary machine such as an electric motor, a pump, a compressor, a compressor/generator, a pump/generator, or the like is typically a housed, two speed machine comprising either a stator and a rotor or a rotor and a stator. In these machines, the rotor is mechanically coupled to the shaft of a machine (e.g., a compressor or pump) which must be driven. The rotor is mechanically coupled to the shaft of a device, such as a compressor or pump, by a drive mechanism that transmits torque from the rotor to the machine shaft. Usually the drive mechanism includes a housing, known as a xe2x80x9cform-typexe2x80x9d housing, into which the rotor and the shaft of the device is installed. The rotor is supported by a center housing within the form-type housing which forces the rotor to a desired relative position with respect to the shaft. The rotor is coupled to a drive shaft by a drive coupling means located on or near the center housing. The drive coupling means often includes a hub having flanges that extend from the rotor and a drive coupling hub with drive coupling projections that are fixed to the drive coupling flanges to extend into drive coupling receptacles provided in the hub of the shaft. The drive coupling means and the shaft are enclosed within a tubular drive coupling housing that protects the mating parts and directs lubricant to the mating parts to reduce friction. When torque is transmitted through the drive coupling means, the drive coupling housing causes the rotor to rotate with respect to the shaft within the form-type housing. In such motors, the form-type housing is typically made from a non-metallic material, such as molded polymeric material, and is axially threaded on one 570a42141b
