The second-in-command at one of South Africa's biggest housing-related lenders will face murder charges for allegedly assaulting a pregnant woman by punching her in the stomach. Major General (retd) Innes Makhulu has been charged with murder and assault in Gauteng province, in the same central province where he was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of his brother in 2015. The indictment was unsealed on Tuesday, the South African Reserve Bank and the National Credit Act Commission said. The charge sheet alleges that on March 21 last year, Makhulu assaulted the woman in her home in Johannesburg, which resulted in her giving birth to a stillborn baby a week later. The woman then went to Makhulu's Johannesburg home and found him alone there. "He has been arrested and will appear in the Johannesburg Magistrate's Court on Wednesday," the NCA said in a statement. The charges against Makhulu were laid following the National Credit Act Commission's recommendation that he should be sacked from his position as an asset manager at a firm called First Land, but a court ruled against his dismissal in 2016. Makhulu was a major in the South African military for 26 years. He was sentenced in March 2015 to life imprisonment for his role in the death of his brother. He was found not guilty of murder. Mississauga Vipers The Mississauga Vipers are a Canadian Junior ice hockey team from Mississauga, Ontario. They are members of the Southern Junior Hockey League and play their home games at the Civic Centre. History In 2018, the Jr A Tier 1 South Shore League began looking to build a new tier 1-2 venue for the 2018-19 season, and Mississauga was selected for the site of the new Civic Centre. The South Shore League is made up of teams located in Mississauga, Port Hope and Peterborough, Ontario, and was formerly known as the Metro Junior B Hockey League. The South Shore League is a member of the South-Central Junior D Hockey League, which is aligned with the Canadian Junior Hockey League.

On-line sampling coupled on-line derivatization/HPLC-UV detection in electrochemically assisted microextraction for the determination of aroma compounds in water. The method, based on the use of a microprocessor-controlled flow-through thermospray sampling system coupled on-line to high-performance liquid chromatography with UV detection, is used for the determination of different aroma compounds in water. Sampling conditions were optimized in order to obtain a reliable determination of the compounds in question. Optimum sample pre-concentration was achieved with the use of several sorbent materials, the extraction efficiency of which depended on the retention of different analytes. After sample enrichment and some sample clean-up procedures, the aromatic fraction was first analyzed by a flow-through thermospray interface on-line with HPLC for the tentative confirmation of the compound classes present. Then, column switching was used to direct the flow-through thermospray chromatographic column to the flow-through electrochemical reactor, which was used as a detector. The experiments showed that the best performances were obtained with a Bischoff-Nomato thermospray (at 150 degrees C), a C18 sorbent (5 microm Polygus, 2.1 x 150 mm) and H₂O-0.1 M NaOH (0.2 M, pH 12.6) as the volatile extraction solvent. Our best result was an RSD value less than 3% for all compounds, except for styrene, which was 2.3%. Several standards of different compounds were analyzed using this methodology; the results showed excellent agreement with certified values, in all cases except for thiophene and 4-mercapto-2-pentanone. Q: How to allow only one execution on a group of processes, while the others must be stopped? I know it can be done using a semaphore or process group and a cgroup, but I need a program where all the users of the system are the same. I know I can open a separate process for each one with a different user and a different cgroup, but is there another way?
