Q: Is it possible to create an array/list with a lambda expression? Possible

Duplicate: Can you declare a variable (like a list) as the result of a lambda expression? Is it possible to create a variable with an array/list structure inside it as I'm doing with a string below: `string myVar = "Hello"; string myVar2 = myVar + "World";` However, I can't seem to achieve the same thing with an array or list; `List myList = new List(); myList.Add(1); myList.Add(2); myList.Add(3);` This creates a separate list rather than adding to the original. A: How about LINQ: `var myList = new List { "1", "2", "3" }; var result = myList.ToArray();` Although I think you've confused yourself a bit, you can do something like this if you really want to: `public class MyClass { public readonly string MyVar; public MyClass(string myVar) { MyVar = myVar; } } var myObject = new MyClass("Hello");` I'm not sure it's the best approach, however. A: Yes you can... `var myList = new List { "1", "2", "3" };` Do check out this SO question A: Yes it is. `var myVar = new List{1, 2};` I thought I would share a few last minute shooting tips with you.
