A data bus is a shared communications channel between two or more devices, like a computer system, or between one or more devices, such as a sensor or actuator, and a data bus terminal. Data buses are often used for interconnecting computers, or other electronic devices, and peripherals. Data buses may be point-to-point, as with Integrated Drive Electronics (IDE), or they may be multi-drop, as is the case with Universal Serial Bus (USB). Data buses may also be serial, parallel, or optical. To ensure effective transfer of data, a data bus must be well-defined. The data bus may have physically-defined elements such as transmit and receive lines. However, once data is sent down the data bus, it becomes difficult to determine whether a single transmission has actually been successful. In a computer system, data may be sent down a data bus and ultimately displayed on a monitor or similar device. After displaying the data at the monitor, the contents of the data bus may be used to drive the data displayed at the monitor. If a data error occurs before the data is displayed at the monitor, it is often difficult to identify the cause of the data error. Thus, it is desirable to develop methods for identifying data errors on a data bus and systems with such methods.

Q: VHDL feedback loop simulation I have this code and I want to simulate it with a testbench using Modelsim. I'm trying to get the output to simulate the same output as the code but I can't get it. I've tried to set the clock to rise after the output reaches the initial value but when simulation starts the voltage goes to zero before the signal reaches the initial value. Anybody could help?

143 F.2d 605 (1944) LITTLETON, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, v. CHARLES BRENNAN CO. No. 3304. Circuit Court of Appeals, Tenth Circuit. July 20, 1944. *606 Robert N. Anderson, Sp. Asst. to Atty. Gen. (Samuel O. Clark, Jr., Asst. Atty. Gen., and Sewall Key and Morton K. Rothschild, Sp. Assts. to Atty. Gen., on the brief), for petitioner. John V. Regan, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for respondent. Before PHILLIPS, BRATTON, and HUXMAN, Circuit Judges. PHILLIPS, Circuit Judge. Charles Brennan Co. filed a corporate income tax return for 1943, showing $2,015.49 as total income, $2,000 as the adjusted sales price of a producing oil and gas lease, and $5.49 as royalty. The Commissioner determined that the sum of $2,015.49 was the fair market value of the royalty interest in the lease and assessed a deficiency against the taxpayer in the sum of $1,375. The respondent was given an additional period of 20 days within which to file a petition for redetermination of the deficiency. It filed a petition for redetermination, claiming the fair market value of the royalty interest was $150,000, and that the adjusted sales price of the leased property was $123,000. The respondent assigns as error the sustaining of the Commissioner's determination, as made in excess of $2,000, that the fair market value of the royalty interest was $2,015.49. In 1943, the royalty of the lease covered by the return had an effective date of August 6, 1942, and was in effect and producing at the time the return was filed. The respondent's motion for an order to produce the books of account kept by it in its business office was granted. The taxpayer made two depositions and produced one of the books of account. The Commissioner, after the depositions were taken, prepared and filed a proposed stipulation. It recited that the tax involved was $1,375, and that the books of account were produced by the taxpayer in an offer to compromise, in the course of an investigation and an attempt to reach a settlement with regard to the tax involved. It recited that the taxpayer objected to the
