Parliament to refuse Brexit. I have a theory (and I admit I am not a political expert) so I hope it makes sense to you. If I were a UK citizen I would vote NO to Brexit (so I am still a UK citizen), but the solution should be a full plebiscite in the UK, not a referendum. The UK is a "civilised society" (I have been writing a series of novels that touches on this theme); countries like the UK can't afford to have a referendum. A referendum is only a way to find out what your country wants; but, as we see in the UK, it may also be a way to not want what the country wants. I am sorry but I don't get it. Even if I voted NO, nothing would have been changed and, after a short period of time (only some months), I would have voted YES. I see Brexit as a way of killing the UK. The final exit of  $Mg^{2+}$ . The displacement of bound  $Mg^{2+}$  ions from the hydrophobic part of the protein might not directly result in the destabilization of the dimer, but rather increased local structural fluctuations within the dimer could cause the destabilization. Since the hydrophobic part of the protein is involved in an extensive network of stabilizing interactions, the increased dynamics could result in the increased allosteric properties of the complex and a higher catalytic activity. This highlights the importance of dynamics in folding-based allostery [\[\[@R12\]\]](#). Conclusion ===== The
