Cystocele Repair: Clinical Results in a Descriptive Pilot Study. To evaluate the anatomical, functional, and quality-of-life effects of cystocele repair in women with genuine stress incontinence and urge incontinence. A 4-month prospective study was conducted by the Women's Pelvic Health Center in Strasbourg (France) from December 2012 to April 2013. A total of 28 women underwent cystocele repair by laparoscopy with a description of the procedures. The abdominal wall and vaginal support were strengthened by a single-stitch suturing of the periurethral tissue. At the end of the procedures, the anatomical and functional results and patient-reported quality-of-life outcomes were assessed. We observed a complete continence in 2 cases (7.1%), a significant improvement in 21 cases (75.0%), and no improvement in 5 cases (17.8%). Forty-nine percent of the patients had no urodynamic disorders, and 52% of these women (20/38) had no sexual disorders. The median duration of pain was 3 weeks (interquartile range [IQR] 1-6), and the median duration of voiding dysfunction was 3 weeks (IQR 1-6). The median duration of menopausal symptoms was 3 weeks (IQR 0-12). The anatomical and functional results of cystocele repair using this technique were satisfactory. The impact of these findings on the quality of life appears to be low.
