In a day where Oculus Rift is very good but not great, and the long awaited (and well marketed) HTC Vive is making new inroads on the market, a game that can throw all that out the window and tempt you to the stars, well, it's got something going for it. But the good news is that despite the fact that it's absolute nonsense, some people are buying it. And it seems they're willing to do so in

Is it really an emulator? fizz0 February 10th, 2004, 07:01 AM Well, here's my gametv-c-app (which can run on a cartridge. I made it to support games on the GB, GBC and Gameboy Advance MagicBro February 10th, 2004, 02:08 PM Gamecube- Can you try checking the homepage for it. It does look suspiciously like a Gamecube emulator. fizz0 February 12th, 2004, 07:52 AM On a site like there is a real description of the application. It is saying it won't support Gamecube, but it is in fact made for gamecube and was previously known as "Gamecube" XcZapt February 13th, 2004, 09:50 AM Cool, I figured as much. I'm glad it actually works now for Gamecube games. If the uploader can make it so you can use Gamecube-specific games, then it'll be great! The problem with trying to emulate a console is when you emulate something (say for the Wii), you can't actually run anything that's on the "real" console (i.e. Wii). On the bright side, Gamecube games are insanely cheap. You can buy a Gamecube for less than $60 and there's no-one stopping you from making your own game cartridge. fizz0 February 13th, 2004, 10:07 AM "On a site like there is a real description of the application. It is saying it won't support Gamecube, but it is in
