A: I can only guess, but this might be an issue with the fontset (or "FontPro" package) you are using. This answer is based on guesswork. I'm not sure if "Hako" is in the same fontset as "Namiki" is. If you check the initial of the name in the OP's code, you'll see that it has the same character spacing. I think the problem is a bit more complex. library(Hako) library(Hako) pdf() hako char(text = "Hako") You can try and use the following package: (Note, that it is my first package with R so I'm a bit unsure if this will work or not. If it doesn't, take it as just an idea) library(fontpro) You can take a look at: GK 61 Mechanical Gaming Keyboard - 61 Keys Multi Color RGB It contains this picture: Note, that the initial of the company's name in the second picture is "Hako" and not "Namiki". Dengue vector control with chemical and biological methods. Dengue is the fastest growing vector-borne disease in the world. It is an important re-emerging disease and is most importantly an international public health concern. As the disease spreads from endemic areas in tropical and subtropical regions to subtropical areas in temperate zones in recent years, it has been necessary to employ dengue vector control methods to control the vector populations. The control of the dengue vectors is an important and difficult problem. The first dengue epidemic in Brazil was detected in 1983 and the first recorded outbreak in the United States occurred in Florida in 1985. The first dengue epidemic in Australia was in 1997. Dengue has also spread to the island of New Caledonia since 1998 and has been an important epidemic in the Pacific region. As the imported dengue cases increase, control of the Aedes aegypti mosquito vector needs to be strengthened and sustained. The control methods of Aedes aegypti include biological and chemical methods. This paper ## reviews the current status of the dengue vector control methods, including the biological and chemical control approaches and the impact of the different methods on the vector in different geographical locations.Q: Counting number of zeros in array I have an array
