CD-ROM's A CD-ROM is a small disk that stores data and software for PCs. The first CDs were made to provide drivers for PCs, but the word is now commonly used to describe a wide range of data discs that can be read by computers. Many CD-ROMs that are used for educational purposes are known as _software CD-ROMs,_ and they provide computer games, educational packages, and other software that can be used in a classroom. Be aware, though, that many of these DVDs come with ads and aren't as reliable as CD-ROMs that are distributed with the machines.

Structural analysis of green leaf volatiles emitted by three woody species under different light levels. Flowers and fruits are the main sources of green leaf volatiles (GLVs) in the terrestrial environment and have attracted much attention recently. However, differences in the expression of the GLVs biosynthetic pathway between flowers and fruits have never been systematically studied. Here, we examined the emission of GLVs from leaves of Japanese hop (Humulus japonicus), tea (Camellia sinensis), and Japanese pear (Pyrus pyrifolia) in different light conditions. Characterization of the volatiles emitted from leaves showed that GLVs from all the three species are composed of aldehydes and alcohols. However, their relative abundance differed between the three species, with the hop having the highest levels of the

phenylpropanoids
methyl salicylate
and methyl 3-hydroxy-2-phenylpropionate, and the pear having the highest levels of the
monoterpenes
1,8-cineole and α - terpinene. In contrast, the Japanese tea
showed low levels
of these
phenylpropanoid
compounds but high levels of monoterpenes. These results imply that, despite the existence of many conserved biosynthetic steps, the biosynthetic pathway differs between the species. In addition, we found that the composition of the GLVs emitted by the tea depended on the light level, indicating that light may play a role in regulating the expression of the GLVs biosynthetic pathway. The Obama administration has demanded the extradition of HSBC bank executive Chien Kuo-tsao, who is wanted in Taiwan on more than $2 billion of charges related to bank lending fraud. US authorities are seeking the 63-year-old's arrest and extradition on accusations that he bribed bank officials in Taiwan with commissions linked to a major government-backed infrastructure project, the Associated Press reported Tuesday. U.S. prosecutors charge Chien, of Leesburg, Va., with 51 counts of conspiracy, bank and wire fraud. A Department of Justice extradition complaint, dated Tuesday, did not include details of the allegations. It said Chien was responsible for underwriting and guaranteeing more than $1 billion in loans from the Taipei-based Industrial and Commercial Bank of China to 28 companies, including a steelmaker controlled by the son of a Chinese president, and at least two government-owned companies. "I want to thank the
