What's New in the?

Webpage Capture adds a button to the IE toolbar that when clicked will save any page you visit for later use. The button is accessible through IE 7's toolbar and has two options available. First, you can export the current page and save it to a.JPG format, or you can choose to get a standard image. It is this image that will be saved. If you need to use the image for more purposes then we have included options to make the image as big as you like and even give you a link to the image when you export it. Feature: There are 2 options available on saving a page: .1. Export to JPG - from this option you can export the current page you are visiting to a JPG format. .2. Save as Image - if you do not want to export the current page, you can opt to use this option to capture your current page's HTML and it will save to a.JPG format. This will give you a standard captured image. All the features have been designed to make this add-on a very user friendly experience and easy to use.
