FIFA (from short for Forza Italia Soccer Club) is a series of football video games by EA, first released in September 1994. EA aims to create the most realistic football experience possible. They believe that games should lead to enhanced player skills, visual improvement, as well as providing a fun and enjoyable experience in the sports world. The game is presented in a 3rd person perspective and the game allows players to select any "name" or "tag", in place of their actual name. The game allows players to carry their own personal stylization, a collection of "attributes" that allow the player to alter their visual appearance. There are five main game modes: PES 2018 One of the biggest differences between FIFA and other soccer games is the license system. FIFA often can be considered as the spiritual successor to the Tony Hawk's Pro Skater series, focusing on detailed graphics and player animations and also including numerous licensed teams and players. FIFA also launched with better gameplay mechanics, tighter controls and more realistic physics. On the other side, PES takes the game to more arcade/arcade-style, favoring graphics and user-interface over realism. The gameplay is also very different. FIFA uses the "Athlete" system (first seen in PES) for defense. In FIFA, when an offside occurs, the defender of the offside has the option to foul or to play the ball. In PES, the defender automatically plays the ball. The "Athlete" system in FIFA also includes the following: Crouch: When a player has the ball, he can crouch by pressing the Crouch Button, as it would be done in real life. In PES, this is not possible at all. Crouch stops the player from passing and also the player can not hit the ball with the foot while crouching. Speed: When a player has the ball, he can press and hold the Y Button, as it would be done in real life. In PES, the player can only touch the ball in one direction at a time, no dribbling (this may be due to the left stick being much higher than in FIFA) Technique: The player can also press the Z Button to simulate a trick. This will change the direction the player is facing as well as the direction the player will take in the next action. However, the player can not change direction on the fly, and instead
