The idea of “HyperMotion” has proven to be a valuable component of FIFA gameplay. The technology has helped FIFA creators describe new attributes, enhance animations, and unlock additional depth in movement and positioning. “HyperMotion” has given the game a noticeable boost in realism and has allowed the game to capture the muscularity, athleticism and speed of the players. This week, EA introduced the Top 100 players in the soccer world as rated by FIFA 22’s “HyperMotion” engine. The “HyperMotion” Top 100 is made up of 23 of the world’s best football players as chosen by the FIFA community in the FIFA 21 Ultimate Team community, as well as 77 of the world’s elite midfielders – the best of the top 100 ranked for skill and ranking. The remaining 90 midfielders were selected by FIFA's "HyperMotion" technology to appear in the FIFA 22 Top 100. Players selected for the FIFA 22 Top 100 are also featured on EA Sports' FIFA Team of the Year, released in association with the magazine FourFourTwo in December 2019. A total of 500 players from across the globe were selected by our expert panel to appear in the FIFA Team of the Year. You can view the results here. A total of 888 players appeared in the FIFA 22 Top 100, and the complete Top 100 appears in the FIFA 22 Season Pass (available now). You can also select the "HyperMotion" Top 100 or your own team of the year. While FIFA 20 introduced "F1 Drives," a stunt action system that lets players take a little bit of the action home on their game consoles, the "HyperMotion" Top 100 includes extensive new stunt action elements, including new free kicks, round kicks, shots, as well as dodges and leaps. Our "HyperMotion" Top 100 players span 14 nationalities and 16 different leagues. Players in the FIFA 22 Top 100 ranked by FIFA 22 "HyperMotion" Ratings
