Although there have been many reports of osseous abnormalities of the ankle, including talus, tarsal bones, and calcaneus, there have been few reports of talar fractures or of osteochondral fractures of the lateral talar process. We report three patients with osteochondral fractures of the lateral talar process. Two of the patients sustained sports-related injuries, and one sustained a nontraumatic injury. An anterior approach with intraoperative radiographic imaging enabled evaluation and appropriate fixation of the fracture and good outcomes. Recurrent hemorrhage requiring repeated imaging occurred in one patient with a concomitant tarsal coalition. Osseous lesions of the ankle often result from ligament and tendon injuries, but rarely occur in isolation.A sign in front of a building in the Delver neighbourhood of Winnipeg shows the minimum monthly rent for different-sized apartments. (CBC) One of the world's largest real estate agencies is now calling on the provincial government to step in and declare an affordable housing emergency in Winnipeg to protect residents from skyrocketing rental costs. The Royal LePage said it's studying the issue and is calling on the province to consider raising the age of affordability regulations from 20 to 30 years, which could bring more senior citizens into the

Many manufacturing, testing and service industries have adopted automation. For example, drug discovery, clinical testing, bio-informatics, healthcare systems, and manufacturing processes have all benefited from automation. Oftentimes, the information obtained from these types of systems can be used to identify trends in the activities that are performed or that produce, or are associated with the production of, a product. This information may be used to adjust and tune the automation system, and/or process associated with the production, and thereby improve the production or quality of the product. Conventional monitoring systems, however, are not capable of collecting and analyzing massive amounts of data in a timely manner in order to adjust and tune the automation system or process. In order to overcome these shortcomings, conventional monitoring systems have recently began to use multi-threading techniques in an attempt to increase the processing power. While these techniques may increase the processing power of the monitoring system, they can lead to inefficiencies, duplicative processes, and other problems. Further, conventional monitoring systems are generally resource constrained in that conventional monitoring systems are often limited by the amount of available memory, power, and processing power of the monitoring system. The limited processing power
