Effect of vitamin A on DNA methylation of the human orotidine-5'-phosphate decarboxylase promoter. We have previously reported that the human orotidine-5'-phosphate decarboxylase (ODCase) promoter is specifically targeted to actively growing cells in a cell-specific manner, which suggests that epigenetic events may play an important role in the regulation of the ODCase gene. In this report, we find that ODCase mRNA and ODCase promoter activity decreased with the increase of cellular vitamin A and suggested that DNA methylation may be involved in regulating ODCase promoter activity in response to cellular vitamin A levels.
