HINTS 1 Mix the Hint ingredients together and work it into the dough (I used a small amount of flour). Knead the dough for a few minutes and then place in the freezer to allow the mixture to chill. 2 After the dough has been resting for a while, roll it out into a nice thin sheet, use a pizza cutter or knife, and then cut the dough into circles. Place the circles of dough in a lightly greased pan. The dough may seem quite fragile, but it will be handled and used up and it's usually a safe bet that it won't break as it bakes. 3 Preheat the oven to 500 degrees F. Remove the dough circles from the pan and place them on a pizza pan or cookie sheet. Bake for 15 minutes, then carefully remove the circles and place them back in the oven to bake for an additional 5 minutes. 4 After the 7th or 8th time (it seems, lol) you bake the circles, you may want to place them on a baking sheet or in a pizza pan. This gives the crust a nice golden color. 5 While the circles of dough are baking, mix up your filling. 6 After you remove the circles of dough from the oven, spread a thin layer of sauce on the base of the dough circles. Spread your favorite topping on your pizza and then add a healthy amount of cheese. Sprinkle more cheese on top of the pie, followed by shredded lettuce. 7 Return the pizza to the oven and bake for another 10-15 minutes or until the cheese has fully melted and the crust has browned a bit. 8 Serve with a glass of cold milk and enjoy! Q: "Convert to Float" in R is giving value of NaN Convert vector of int to float in R gives NAN. What is the reason? > N 1234_to_float(1234) [1] NaN > 1234/N [1] NaN A: As stated by @datascience101, R round a number in the fractional part to the nearest integer when you perform a division between two integers. This is an exact equivalent of what you are doing here: > N 1234_to_float(1234) [1] NaN > round(1234/N) [1] NaN So you are dividing 1234, which is not a float, and the resulting value is rounded to the nearest integer. The solution is to convert it to a float: > 1234/as.numeric(1234) [1] 0.1840997 But, if you are sure that you really want to work with int values, you can cast to a float: > 1234_to_float(as.integer(1234)) [1] 1.84 I guess that you are using RStudio and you can just wrap this conversion in your function, which can simplify it a bit: vector Background Information When Aristotle wrote the "Poetics" some two hundred years after the birth of Jesus, poets had moved from the stage to the printed word. Some poets were well-known figures like Plato, Plutarch, Virgil, Horace and Horatius. Others were less well-known, but were important in their own way. These were the sixteenth-century poets. They produced not just poetry but drama, parody, satire, elegiac verse, and a great deal more besides, demonstrating the range of the poet's art. From the classical myths of Homer, and the histories of Sallust and Herodotus, to the comedies of Terence, the satires of Juvenal and Horace, and the elegies of Plautus and Callimachus, they have passed their art and influence on to us. They were certainly the greatest Renaissance poets. The Dead Sea Scrolls The discovery of these early texts was a stunning event in
