Articles and information about experience with percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty in infants. Percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty was attempted in 25 patients (mean age 5.9 +/- 4.5 years, range 1 day to 16 years) from September 1982 to August 1986. The patients included 20 infants and 5 children. Indications for balloon angioplasty included coronary restenosis following balloon angioplasty (5), coronary stenosis (9), dilated thrombotic myocardial infarction (8), stenosis in aorta-coronary bypass graft (3), and complicated coronary atherosclerosis following cardiac surgery (2). The balloon catheter used in all patients was an available 5 F. 30 or 6 F. catheter. In each of these cases, after a 5 mm or 6 mm balloon (NuCor) was used to dilate the stenotic lesion, the diameter of the artery was investigated using the gauge of the catheter sheath. Dilatation was attempted with the occlusion of the blood flow followed by pressure measurement of the coronary artery during balloon inflation. The results of 23 angioplasties were excellent (restenosis within one month) in 22 cases (95%), good (restenosis less than one month) in 1 case, and poor (restenosis more than one month) in 2 cases. These patients have been followed up for 11.6 +/- 7.1 months. The recurrence rate of restenosis was 22% at 15 months after the angiop 648931e174
