I have created the following user control: using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using System.Windows.Forms; using System.Data; namespace College.Controls { public partial class ColorPicker : UserControl { public ColorPicker() { InitializeComponent(); } public static void ShowColor(Color col) { MessageBox.Show(col.ToString()); } } } This control works correctly when I use it in a Windows Forms application on any other sub-form or button in that form. However, in the Windows Forms application I use for the main form of the application, when I drop the control on a label I get an error message that reads "Could not find a part of the path 'C:\Windows\SysWOW64\inetsrv\corp\finance\help_index.html'.". I have looked at the C:\Windows\SysWOW64\inetsrv\corp\finance\help_index.html file, but I don't understand why it can't be found. Why is this happening? Thanks. A: This link will take you to the Microsoft web server that is hosting the file that you are trying to access. It looks like you're trying to access it from your 64-bit version of the OS - 32-bit applications can't access files from the 64-bit OS. Does it work if you access it from within the 64-bit application that's hosting the control? 804945ef61

P/S : Good Luck Anyone using the QB Auto Corrosion kit that's supposed to be no moisture cure but does trigger paint very well? I'm using the 150 gr balls in a 3k volume pack in the spray booth to get a more controlled shot of area. I've noticed a fair amount of this so I'm wondering if anyone has had any luck or experience with it? I'm not seeing any issues with it so I just let it dry, let it sit overnight to cure, then paint the next day. I'll probably be giving them all a good coat of clear (maybe 2 or 3) the next time. Anyone have any experience with it? It's not a terrible deal either, I paid around $10/ball for the brand with a good amount of volume. I don't think that ball will ever trigger your paint and I'm actually adding it to the line up. Instead I'm using the clear shell with Zorch or Krylon Halo White to make a colorless polish. Also I'm adding wax to the line up to change the tone a bit. A year or so ago, I was working on the truck we were in the process of selling and the guy let me borrow his power sprayer. I had the QB-Auto Corrosion on it and the guy said it was great and he never had a problem with any paint. I was getting some F&I bucks so I was leery of using it but he was adamant that it was great. We were walking back to the shop and I noticed his paint on the F-150 was really black. He was like "No worries, it's perfect. My sister in law has that color on
