Roblox is the second largest multiplayer, virtual world and game creation platform where users can play games, develop games, and learn how to code in Lua. Currently (September 2019), more than 164 million people play Roblox games every month. Users are able to create their own games using graphical engines, characters, and music and share them with their friends and the world. One of the most exciting features of the Roblox platform is that the player has complete freedom to create the game. The user-created content (UCC) becomes the property of the player, but Roblox retains the copyright. With more than 160 million people, Roblox is the world’s largest virtual game platform. The creation of games, graphics, and models are made with a graphical programming language called Lua. Roblox uses a code-based platform for storing data, and it allows other programmers to build their own extensions for the engine. Users do not need to be good at coding to use Roblox; anyone can create content and jump into gameplay. Roblox offers several types of games: Action games Board games City building games Exploration games First-person shooters Jump'n'Run games Mecha games Multiplayer games Role playing games Social games Space games Sports games Sports games. Kids Games: Both computer games for the adult audience and games for children are available. More than 300 new games are added every week to the Roblox catalog. The micro-transactions offered within the game itself are much smaller than those in other games. All players have complete control over their items and a complete free-to-play option is available to the players as well. The free-to-play option allows them to play as much as they want for free but will soon stop them at some limit. The virtual items are separated from the player’s inventory; the items cannot be sold to others and if an item is destroyed, it cannot be re-created. The community provides several moderation tools to keep the Roblox community safe. The Player’s Club allows players to contact Roblox’s admin team using an app. The Roblox team itself has its own team chat. Roblox also allows players to report inappropriate behavior and does not require any personal information for the reporting.
